The Practice of Forcing Christians to Become Moslems.

This is Especially So in the Provinces of Harpoot, Diarbekir and Bitlis.

The Purpose to Abolish Christianity is Pressed Forward With the Whole Force of the Government-Degradation of Christian Women in Armenia.

(Correspondence of the United Press.) LONDON, March 16. - The United Press correspondent at Constantinople sends the following: Later news from Harpoot shows in that vilayet at least some sort of order have gone out to discountenance the forced conversions. When the authori ties from Harpoot telegraphed to Con stantinople for instructions, the reply came: "Do not use force to convert."

The local governor interpreted the orders literally and even announced that every one was to return. This change, however, is only in the cities and large towns; in villages and ham lets such orders will have no effect Information from various points in the provinces of Sivas, Harpoot, Diarbekir Bitlis and Van shows that the practice of forcing Christians to become Mos lems is still in active progress.

The purpose to abolish Christianity pressed forward with the whole force of the government, by the indirect means of depriving the Christian communities of their men of influence who have survived the massacres.

In every town or city where the massacres occurred, arrests of such men are now in progress. No charges are preferred against the men arrested.

Another indirect way of destroying the Christian communities in these devasted provinces is the degradation of womanhood among the Christian communities. A systematic debauchery of Christian women is carried on in nearly all the devastated districts. It is as if the Turks wish to make sure that the women, always conservative in matters of religion, shall lose their self-respect women, day after day, week after week,

Alas, it seems that the Christian gov ernments are powerless in the presence of the beggared nation of nine millions of Turks, or they are unwilling to take any peremptory measures to prevent formula furnished by the Rolston The mere residence of a consul will stop a host of infamies which the Turks ordinarily dare to commit only when they think they can deny them with
